Summary

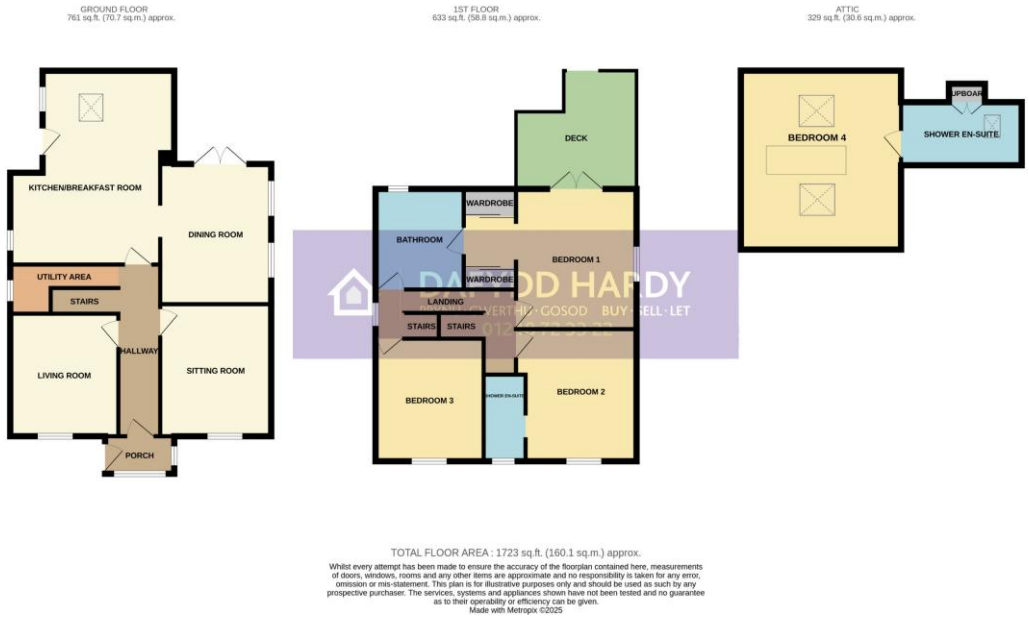

Goleufryn is a handsome, stone-fronted period home enjoying far-reaching countryside and sea views on Anglesey's eastern coastline. Blending character detail with modern comforts, the accommodation extends to approx. 1,723 sq ft and flows from a welcoming hallway to two reception rooms, a cosy living room with wood-burning stove and a separate sitting/reading room with feature open fireplace, together with a bright dining room currently arranged for eight. The heart of the home is the kitchen/breakfast room, fitted with an electric oven, induction hob and dishwasher, warmed by a second wood-burner and flooded with light from the skylight, with an understairs utility area. The property benefits from sea views from all main rooms. On the first floor, the primary bedroom enjoys a dressing area with built-in wardrobes and patio doors opening to a private deck that links to the top garden, and shares a stylish Jack-and-Jill bathroom featuring a freestanding claw-foot bath and walk-in shower; two further bedrooms sit on this level, one with its own en-suite shower room. The second floor presents a charming attic bedroom within the eaves, also with an en-suite shower room and skylights for excellent natural light. Outside, established front and rear gardens provide generous lawns, patios and a deck with glass balustrade, complemented by an orangery, off-road parking and a detached garage. Oil central heating and uPVC double glazing are installed. The property has private access via a gate at the top of the garden to Mariandyrys Nature Reserve, as well as a footpath opposite the house that leads down to Fedw Fawr (National Trust) and White Beach, while historic Beaumaris, with its renowned castle, independent shops, galleries, cafés and restaurants, is a short drive away.

If you're looking for a modern characterful home, with sea views and within a short drive of amenities, you'll want to be looking at this one.
